MORNING TIME

Write the month's memory verse on a card and drop it into your kid's backpack or lunch box as a reminder to cooperate with their friends and teachers.

MEAL TIME

Ask a kid: How have your friends or family worked together to help someone in need?

Ask a parent: When have you been a part of something big because of cooperation? How did it make you feel?

DRIVE TIME

Watch this month's music video "Something Really Great" on either the Parent Cue app or Studio252.tv. Can you make up motions for the chorus?

BED TIME

Read Acts 2:42-47. Then, each of you name one thing your family likes to do together. Ask God to give you a heart to work together to help others.

PARENT TIME

Our kids spend a lot of time playing team sports, performing in ensembles, and doing group projects at school, so it's easy to think they have cooperation all figured out. But when we watch a group of kids playing together, it doesn't always go so well. Too often they'll argue about the rules of the game longer than they actually play the game. Maybe cooperation isn't as second nature as we might think.

But when our kids do cooperate with us, and their friends, teachers, coaches, and small group leaders, things tend to go better. We can get chores done faster, do schoolwork better, and make a bigger difference in our world. Working together allows us to do more than we could do alone.
